OPERETTA REMIX 2023

This past summer, Operetta Remix, our summer camp for students 13 to 18 years old, performed on the main stage of the Detroit Opera House for the first time after many years, and with our largest company of 24 students. The repertoire consisted of pieces from the operetta, opera, and musical theatre canon, which were directed by Dr. Mary Martin and involved musical director Joseph Jackson, choreographer Olivia Kimes, and vocal coaches Jessica Fielder and Dorian Dillard. Stay tuned for details soon about Operetta Remix 2024.

UNDER THE SNOW

This year, Detroit Opera commissioned a children's opera, in collaboration with the Detroit Puppet Company and composer Shara Nova, called The Subnivean Zone: Under the Snow. The opera is about a young child who is encouraged to play outside and discovers another world under the snow, meeting different animals and learning new lessons about life. Carrie Morris of Detroit Puppet Company has created a magical setting with interactive puppetry and with Shara Nova's new harmonic language, Under the Snow is a fresh take on opera for young audiences.

STORYBOOK OPERA

Storybook Opera shares Rossini's Cinderella and Seymour Barab's Little Red Riding Hood in shortened form aimed for audiences pre-kindergarten to first grade. Our teaching artists introduce the stories, dancing, vocal exploration, and a few selections from the operas. With the guidance of Dr. Shannan Hibbard from Wayne State University, this program encourages early literacy comprehension infused with the creativity of song and dance.

At the top of the stairs is a dark wood door with a glowing "EXIT" sign. Through the door, a grand chandelier hangs from the ceiling in a brightly lit area with ornate architectural details.

Introducing

Patty Isacson Sabee

With this month's performance of Carmen, we are delighted to welcome Patty Isacson Sabee, who started on January 2 as Detroit Opera's new President and CEO.

"It gives me chills every time to be able to say 'President and CEO of Detroit Opera,'" she says. "This company is about opportunity. It's about innovation. Most of all, it is about Detroit."

At Detroit Opera, Wayne Brown proved that he understood what it means to truly bring art to this community, creating a new way for us to work. Detroit Opera is where it's happening, in so many ways! There's the extraordinary legacy of David DiChiera and the historic Detroit Opera House, and the incredible work of the artistic team—Yuval Sharon, Christine Goerke, Roberto Kalb, and Jon Teeuwissen. I've talked to people at Detroit Opera who've worked here 31 years, and people who've been here for 30 days, and you all light up when you talk about Detroit Opera. That says the world to me about what kind of place this is, and what we can be."

You'll be hearing more from Patty in the months to come, but to start off the year we'd like to share an informal interview with Christine Goerke, our Associate Artistic Director, when Patty was introduced to the company's staff and board last August.

Christine Goerke: We're so thrilled to have you here! It's an exciting time for the company, the way we're moving forward every time we make a change. What are you most looking to about this new chapter?

Patty Isacson Sabee: I am most looking forward to an opportunity to dive into an organization that is really thinking about what it means to be an opera company and a dance presenter and an opera house and a community trusted partner for today's audiences, for what people are experiencing now, for the way that they want to enjoy and nurture their souls. That is what I see Detroit Opera doing.

CG: For the past few years, Detroit Opera has had a national and international impact, which is incredible. What do you think that this means for Detroit—this broader reach?

PIS: I think it means attracting the kinds of international talent that we have seen coming to Detroit. It means attracting the staff and production teams who come to work here, who see the stature and what Detroit Opera can bring. It means an opportunity for our impact to be more than just what happens for the community here, because that's what we all want: to grow more opera lovers. The more people who experience and love opera and the more that people here get to see dance from all over the world—Jon Teeuwissen is bringing all kinds of international companies here—this is the way for Detroit to experience the world, and for the world to experience Detroit. It's amazing!

CG: You've had an immense amount of experience working in both the orchestral and museum worlds. How will you bring that experience to Detroit Opera?

PIS: The experience that I've had in the museum world has been about taking advantage of every way we have now to approach presenting arts and culture. Planet Word, the museum that I helped start in Washington, D.C., doesn't have a collection. It's about ideas, like opera, which is about such big ideas. It isn't necessarily just about reading a text box and looking at something. It's about experiencing the power and beauty and the joy—it's about activating with your own voice. It's about connection across the stage, and this is what I see Detroit Opera doing in the way that we're educating and engaging with the community, the way that we are starting to look at opera and how it can be deconstructed and constructed, how we can use the vast possibilities of technology and animation to really explode the visuals and the scenic elements, to engage with everything we have, to make opera as exciting and as relevant as it can be.

CG: How would you like to build on the legacy of your two predecessors?

PIS: That's hard to answer, because of the extraordinary work they've done. It's up to all of us to embrace what David DiChiera and Wayne Brown have done for Detroit Opera, and bring it forward. We are a team that's going to make this work together.

CG: Lightning round! What opera character would you play if you could sing any role in opera?

PIS: Actually, I'm shy. So, what is it like to be Brünnhilde?

CG: Oh, it's really loud! That's a good one, I'm not going to lie. What's your favorite opera performance or opera experience?

PIS: Oh, my gosh—it's hard to choose, with so many favorite opera experiences! But I do have a guilty pleasure. Do you know the Franco Zeffirelli La Traviata film? I've probably seen it 22 or 23 times.

CG: Best topping for Detroit style pizza?

PIS: Pepperoni.

CG: What does the S in Wayne S. Brown stand for?

PIS: Superman?

CG: Tigers, Lions or Red Wings?

PIS: Pistons?

CG: Favorite Motown classic?

PIS: R-E-S-P-E-C-T!

CG: You studied the viola: what's the best viola joke?

PIS: Okay, Christine. So, a violist and a soprano were thrown off a cliff. Who landed first?

CG: I'm terrified by this.

PIS: The violist, because the soprano had to stop halfway down to ask for directions.

CG: I promise the questions will be harder next time!

A message from Jon H. Teeuwissen

According to OPERA America, the national membership organization for opera companies, Detroit Opera is that rare American opera company that in addition to producing opera also presents dance. While this may be unusual in the U.S., most European opera houses are home to performances of both opera and dance. Thankfully, this is the hybrid model that appealed to David DiChiera when he founded this company.

The integration of ballet and opera was first made popular in 18th-century France, during the height of the French Baroque period. That framework was never adopted by Italian opera. Sometimes, ballets within operas become popular as stand-alone works. A perfect example is the Polovtsian Dances from Borodin's 1890 Russian opera Prince Igor. The ballet from the opera was choreographed by Fokine and had its premiere in 1909; it was so popular that Diaghilev added it to the repertoire of the world-famous Ballets Russes. La Sonnambula was a ballet—choreographed by Jean-Pierre Aumer to music by Ferdinand Hérold—before becoming the well-known Bellini opera four years later.

Most frequently, works have premiered as operas before dance versions were created. Two of the most popular ballet versions of operas are Onegin, choreographed by John Cranko for the Stuttgart Ballet, and The Merry Widow, choreographed by Ronald Hynd for the Australian Ballet in Melbourne. There are many Shakespeare plays that are both ballets and operas: A Midsummer Night's Dream, Othello, Romeo and Juliet, and The Winter's Tale.

Bizet's opera Carmen has held an attraction for many choreographers. Known for its passion and sensuality, the story can be conveyed in a different way through movement of the human body and dance. Carlos Saura created a flamenco dance-film Carmen in 1983, and choreographer Dada Masilo added his ballet version in 2010. In 2015, Johan Inger created an award-winning dance version for the Compañía Nacional de Danza in Madrid that emphasizes the story's universal themes of love and passion, the impact violence can have on those who witness it, and the destruction of innocence. During this North American tour, Detroit Opera is the only U.S. venue to present Carmen, heralded as "The biggest, boldest contemporary ballet of the decade" by the Santa Barbara Independent.

Enjoy!

Harriet Berg

Detroit's Champion of Dance

Harriet Berg's life work has been to put Detroit on the map for the modern dance, folk dance, and historical dance movements. Anyone who has attended dance productions at the Detroit Opera House for the past three decades will have encountered Harriet in the lobby, the auditorium, or backstage, always eager to share her passion for dance. After Dance Theatre of Harlem's performances here in October, she met with the company's artistic team, recalling her interactions with founder Arthur Mitchell and the role she played in introducing him to David DiChiera in the 1970s. During that time, she and DiChiera were responsible for presenting so many dance companies at Music Hall for the Performing Arts that the hall was referred to as "the dance center of the Midwest." Together with Carol Halsted, Detroit Opera's first Director of Dance, she was responsible for presenting dance symposiums, initiatives, and companies at the Detroit Opera House in the late 1990s through the mid-2000s. She was an integral part of Detroit Opera's dance council.

Harriet Jean (Jeanie) Waratt Berg was born in Detroit on December 6, 1924. She taught dance for many years at Wayne State University and was founder and artistic director of Renaissance Dance Company, Madame Cadillac Dance Theater, Belles and Bachelors of Fort Detroit, and the Isadora Duncan Dance Ensemble, as well as several dance groups based at the Jewish Community Center of Detroit. She has choreographed performances inspired by folk tales and songs, Biblical stories, American and Jewish themes, Israeli folk themes, and French and Detroit history. Expressing history, religious inspiration, and cultural tradition through dance is one of Harriet's unique contributions to the arts. With her late husband, Irving Berg, she established and endowed the Michigan Dance Archives at the university in the 1980s. Harriet's mentors and friends include Isadora Duncan, Merce Cunningham, Twyla Tharp, Martha Graham, and Louis Falco. She has traveled across the United States and internationally to participate in and teach workshops and perform with her dance companies. Even in her early nineties, Harriet continued to travel to the American Dance Festival at Connecticut College, where she had been present at its founding in 1948.

We salute Harriet Berg, who has inspired generations of dancers who have themselves become professionals, amateurs, and lovers of dance and the arts. Please consider making a gift of $99 in honor of Harriet's 99th birthday, in support of Detroit Opera's dance programs. Contact Zach Suchanek for further information at 313.237.3427 or zsuchanek@detroitopera.org.

About Johan Inger's Carmen

Johan Inger's Carmen is a reimagined version of Georges Bizet's opera that takes a contemporary look at Prosper Mérimée's original 1845 story as seen through the eyes of a child. The music includes Rodion Shchedrin's Carmen Suite, an arrangement of the Bizet original, plus additional electronic music by Marc Álvarez. Inger's Carmen strips the story to its universal themes of love and passion, emphasizing the impact violence can have on those who witness it and on society as a whole. The world premiere of Compañía Nacional de Danza's Carmen took place in 2015 at Teatro de la Zarzuela, Madrid, and earned Inger the Benois de la Danse prize in 2016.

“There is a certain mystery within this character,” says Inger. “It could be any kid, it could be Don José when he was a boy, it could be a young Micaela or Carmen and José’s unborn child. It could even be ourselves, with our very first goodness wounded due to a violent experience that, though brief, has had a negative impact in our lives and our ability to interact with others forever. The story witnessed through the eyes of a young watcher reveals the tale stripped to its mythic and universal elements of passion and violence.”

Bizet's Carmen, first performed in 1875, tells the story of the downfall of soldier Don José and his obsession with the fiery femme fatale Carmen.

It is one of the world's most popular, frequently performed operas, with well-known arias ranging from Carmen's “Habanera” to the “Toreador Song,” sung by the bullfighter Escamillo. Carmen has been adapted numerous times for multiple formats, including Otto Preminger's 1954 film Carmen Jones, Peter Brook's stage adaptation La Tragédie de Carmen (1983), Carmen on Ice (1990) with choreography for figure skaters, and the film Carmen: A Hip Hopera (2001) starring Beyoncé Knowles.

This Carmen emphasizes timelessness, a contemporary aesthetic with a subtle proximity to the 1960s: removed from stereotype and from the period that we normally associate with the story. Soldiers become corporate executives. The matador resembles a film or rock star. Seville can be anyplace, a tobacco factory any industry, and the mountains of Ronda as the mind of someone on the edge. The floor starts out light and ends darker; costumes in Act I are colorful, and in Act II greys and blacks predominate. Three prisms, moved by three dancers via the choreography, represent the universe depicted in Carmen—three are a crowd, three stir up jealousy, three, alas, flow into violence.

CAPITAL CAMPAIGN FOR THE DETROIT OPERA HOUSE

The Detroit Opera Board of Directors began the first phase of fundraising for the Detroit Opera House capital improvements in January 2020. This multiphase capital campaign grew from recommendations identified in the facilities master plan completed by Albert Kahn Associates, Inc. Scheduled facility improvements and upgrades will shape the patron experience at the opera house for years to come.

We extend heartfelt thanks to the following donors who made contributions that enabled capital improvements to begin.

AVANTI SOCIETY MEMBERS ENSURING THE FUTURE

Imagine a gift that outlives you, allowing future generations to experience and enjoy the world of opera and dance. That's the goal of the Avanti Society, Detroit Operas' planned gift recognition program.

The Italian word Avanti means "ahead," or "forward." Detroit Opera's Avanti Society represents a designated group of friends who have made plans to include Detroit Opera in their estates—whether by will, trust, insurance, or life income arrangement. We are grateful for the generosity and foresight of those listed below who have chosen to declare their intentions and join the Avanti Society.
